Introduction

“Racism is an ideology of racial domination” (Wilson, 1999: 14). In other words, it means that racism systems encompass economic, political, social, and cultural actions, as well believes those institutionalize and perpetuate an unequal distribution of privileges, resources, and power between white people and people of Color. This system is historic, normalized, taken for the grant, deeply embedded, and works to the benefit of whites and to the disadvantage of people of color (Hiraldo, 2010: 53). Among social scientists, the race is generally understood as a social construction. Biologically, physical differences such as skin color do not have a relationship with ability or behavior in groups, but racial differences still have extraordinary significance in structuring social reality. . However, everyone may have different interpretation of Racism itself, hence, conveying the meaning is important (Febriani, et al. 2020)

Racism involves white people and black people. People do discriminate towards white people or another people who have black skin because of their skin; this qualifies as racism according to the definition because people who have black skin cannot make another people accept their existence.

Racist has known a long ago; it happened and spread out since ago and until now. Racist ideologies were long lasting and framed discussion and policies relating to 'race' and 'race relations' in the post-war period. Black people and Asians that entered Britain in large numbers from the 1950s onwards suffered the social, cultural, political and economic effect of this racism, which had their origin in the mid-nineteenth century onwards.

Bring up racism reflected in material object of this research, Colour Blind novel by Catherine Cookson showed the story of the child of mixed parentage being brought up in Newcastle, England and the struggles and prejudices she has to endure. The story opens before the main character is born. It is 1915 in Newcastle, England - the coal capital of the world. Bridget McQueen has sent a letter home to her parents to say that she will be coming to tea that afternoon to introduce her new husband to the family. Bridget's brother, Matt, is angry that his sister has married before the family has met her husband. When Bridget arrives, the families are in a state of shock to find that Bridget's husband is black. The family is still reeling from the shock when it is discovered that Bridget did not get married in a Catholic Church and that she is pregnant with James's child.

Matt is the evil character in the book. None of the family wants the child to be born. Bridget's mother tries to get a local midwife to attend the birth, so that should the baby not be white, it can kill. Rosa Angela is born. Then, Rose grows up and goes to school, where she has to suffer prejudiced behavior from both pupils and teachers alike. Her Uncle Matt is always threatening her and being verbally abusive. Her life is a misery. One day, one of the girls tells her she will not go to heaven because heaven is for whites only. Rose goes to see the local church to ask the priest if this is so, he says, no, God is colour blind.

The researcher chooses Colour Blind as the object of the research based on some reasons. First, this researcher is interested to analyze of literature. Colour Blind is inspiring because this novel gives some moral value, which can be our lesson in life and has an interesting literary value to discuss. This novel does not only tell about an unwanted child in their parent's family because of skin color but also about racism, discrimination and destroy in the family.

Second, this novel is a real story life, the characters in this book are fictitious and this book does not relate to any living person. The setting of the place is in Tyneside, there are any several actual place-names used in this novel, with the fifteen names of streets like Casey's Wharf, and other parts of Holborn are imaginary.

The researcher will analyze Colour Blind novel on the issue of racism by using Critical Race Theory. The title composed is "Racism Reflected in Colour Blind Novel (1968) By Catherine Cookson: Critical Race Theory."

Findings and Discussion

Findings

In this part, the result of the research contains the Critical Race Theory of the novel towards racism reflected in Colour Blind novel. There are to identify the indicators of racism in Colour Blind novel, to describe racism occurred in Colour Blind novel, and to reveal the reason why the author in the work of Colour Blind novel specifically addresses racism.

1. Indicators of racism in Colour Blind novel

According to Critical Race Theory by Delgado and Stefancic book (2001: 101), there are six indicators of racism, it is conceptually as the following: unmasking color blindness, race, class, welfare, poverty, globalization.

2. Racism occurred in Clour Blind novel

The difference between white people and black people in Colour Blind novel that causes racism. The differences often cause problems themselves, because the differences make people who have the power and power to treat minorities unfairly, discriminate, and be rude to black people who do not have the power and consider weak by white people. The conflict begins to appear when Bridget McQueen married a man who came from black people, and after the daughter of Bridget McQueen and James Paterson was born. She has black skin, so there is no one who wants the birth of McQueen's first daughter because they are afraid and worry if McQueen's daughter was born in the black skin like James Paterson.

The conclusion is racism already exists long before Rose Angela's main character was born. Racism occurs when Bridget McQueen married with James Patterson, Racism arises due to differences, including skin color because Rose Angela's father comes from black people. This difference causes the racist behavior to continue, until finally because she born of the mother who has white skin and the father who has black skin, but she is more dominantly black skin. Rose Angela also feels and accepts racism by others towards her since she was a child until she grows into a teenager, even though she never does racism towards other people.

3. Racism specifically addressed by the author in the work of Colour Blind novel

The author rises this issue because she wants to tell the reader about unity in diversity. The differences of ethnic, racial, or religious in an area even within a country are natural. The problem usually begins from acts of discrimination, unfair treatment, to abusive treatment of minority groups whose position is weak. In this novel, she writes the story about race differences that make the different perspective about white people and black people. The author takes entitle this novel Colour Blind. It means that no matter what the color, we have to tolerance and respect each other because the author wants to show about social values by discriminating against each other is a bad thing and injuring all the people.

Colour Blind published in 1968. The author takes the issue "racism" because, in that year discrimination, unfair treatment is the act that usually happens by the majority toward minority groups that lead to racism in society. That is what often happens in America, where racism practices still occur in the country. The discrimination or racism in America is not something that happened early and occurs in a few years, but it has been going on for a long time in America, since the 17th century. At that time, only white Americans, especially from England, have rights privileges and the privileges given by local laws to white people so that they can access education and also has a living place. This special guarantee makes the status of white people from England is higher than other non-white and non-British people. Even the status of white people from England is higher than 32 with Native Americans (Indians).

Discussion

In analyzing Colour Blind novel by Catherine Cookson based on the issue of racism and using the Critical Race Theory by Delgado and Stefancic (2001: 101). The researcher discusses the result of the analysis to be some parts, there are:

The race is a classification system that is used to categorize people in different populations or groups through physical characteristics, skin color, face shape, which has been inherited. Colour Blind clearly shows the racism committed by people towards black people, a form of discrimination that is constantly carried out regardless of how good humans are, both in terms of physical, brain volume and posture, because humans are now more advanced in thinking so that all humans are equal. Therefore, humans should not be distinguished by race.

Racism is one of the things that often appear in a country that has a variety of cultures, of various kinds of race and ethnicity. For example, in Color Blind novel, the assumptions and thoughts of black races people are known as lazy, less educated and often commit criminal acts. While the white race is known for people who are smart, highly educated, and have decent work and are always on top. This is what breaks the two sides. Supposedly, the people establish harmony in social life, a sense of togetherness and mutual respect must be built so that it can avoid the adverse effects of racism.

Rationalism in rational thinking is a form of racial prejudice. It can be defined that racial prejudice is negative attitudes and judgments that are formed based on improper generalizations towards members of certain racial groups solely because of their origin without looking at one's good or bad behavior. Discrimination is a different treatment of groups based on race. In Color Blind novel, rise to racism problems that are still difficult to solve, because the white race is considered superior to the black race. Therefore, it is part of a joint movement and commitment to realize a world of peaceful life without racism.

The problem of racism is not an important issue in the literary and social world politics in America. In addition, the problem of colonialization does not only occur between the colonizing and colonized people with different nationalities, but also between the state's citizens. Colour Blind give some example how to make bad situation because of racism. So, If the state wants to be strong, then all elements of the nation must together, living together in harmony and peace, without discriminating between religious, skin color, and minority aspects.

Conclusion and Suggestion

The title of this research is Racism Reflected in Colour Blind Novel (1968) by Catherine Cookson: Critical Race Theory. Further, this research is about racism, which the researcher found the indicator of racism in this novel, describing racism occurs in this novel and the reason why the author in the work of Colour Blind novel specifically addresses racism. The researcher makes the conclusion based on the finding that has explained in the previous part. The researcher identifies the indicator of racism into six indicators using Critical Race Theory, it is conceptually as the following: (1) Unmasking Color Blindness; (2) Race; (3) Class; (4) Welfare; (5) Poverty ;(6) Globalization.

From the indicators above, something triggered racism in Colour Blind novel. The indicators classified using Critical Race Theory by Delgado and Stefancic (2001: 101). In the community, there are many cases of discrimination; the actions of discrimination such as treat one person or one group unfairly than other people or groups. Discrimination carried out by individuals, groups, or policies and organizations. Discrimination interpreted as a treatment of individuals differently based on gender, race, religion, age, or other characteristics. One of the most common forms of discrimination is social discrimination. People who go through social discrimination placed in lower dignity than other races. In the world record, western countries had a difficult time due to racial discrimination based on skin colour. The people who have black colour skin, they treated unfairly and often become slaves.

The second is the researcher describes racism occur in Colour Blind novel. Racism already exists long before Rose Angela's main character was born. Racism occurs when Bridget McQueen married with James Patterson, racism arises due to differences, including skin color because Rose Angela's father comes from black people. The differences cause the racist behavior to continue, until finally she was born of the mother who has white skin and the father who has black skin, but she is more dominantly black skin. Rose Angela also feels and accepts racism by others towards her since she was a child until she grows into a teenager, even though she never does racism towards other people.

The third is the researcher reveals the reason why the author in the work of Colour Blind novel specifically addresses racism. Colour Blind published in 1968. The author takes the issue "racism" because, in that year discrimination, unfair treatment is the act that usually happens by the majority toward minority groups that lead to racism in society. That is what often happens in America, where racism practices still occur in the country. Colour Blind has a grim storyline that makes prejudice and ignorance applicable in society at the beginning of the 17th century, the author tells the events and actions of racism in those days with great enthusiasm and well conveyed, various forms of discrimination committed by white people towards black people. Characters play a role make the reader curious, the author also gives a moral message and an example of a form of strong determination to be a lesson in strong economic conditions that must be taken into account during this era. So, every line in this novel is a text that contains fictional stories and will not be forgotten by the readers.

After explaining the conclusion and educational implication of the research, the researcher has some suggestions that are hopefully useful for all the readers. Colour Blind is an inspiring novel because this novel gives some moral value, which can be our lesson in life and has an interesting literary value to discuss. This novel not only tells about an unwanted child in their parent's family because of skin color but also about racism, hate and how it destroys a family. From this novel, we can know how the indicators of racism (unmasking color blindness, race, class, welfare, poverty, and globalization) racism occurs in social life and the negative impact for life.

The researcher suggests to the next other researchers to make deeper research of the novel Colour Blind by Catherine Cookson (1968) with another issue that suitable with the novel Colour Blind. After analyzing this novel and drawing the conclusion, this research paper is far for perfection because of the researcher's limited knowledge and understanding of literary work based on the sociological approach. The researcher hopes that this study can inspire other researchers to analyze the same issue in different novels and take values from Colour Blind.
